Textile Sector Grievances

Despite the country's struggle to curb the ballooning trade deficit, the textile sector is still expected to hit the $20 billion export mark by the end of the fiscal year. However, industry insiders are urging the government to provide low cost and smooth supplies of power and natural gas to ensure that Karachi—the country's financial hub—does not experience the extinction of its industrial sector.

The politics of headless chickens

This by all means is the toughest surgery Pakistan has gone through in its history to just stay afloat in the intensive care unit. At 14 per cent, inflation is out of control even though the majority of economic decisions are in the very initial stage or yet to be taken.
